
On display

The students with learning difficulties in one college wanted to see their work acknowledged and displayed in the same way as the work of other students. As part of their project work, they designed some posters and displays about their views of college life. They used some of the project funding to have these items laminated and presented professionally. They displayed this work in an exhibition in the entrance lobby of the college and also succeeded in getting their artwork hung along college corridors – alongside the work of other college students. Having their work on public display like this helped these students to feel fully part of college life.